Student Senate Passes Activity Fee Increase

Organizing

Alumni Assoc.

Although an Alumni Association is not an existing organization, plans are currently underway to form one at DMACC in the near future.

As of July 1, 1975 a computer will be available to print up current mailing lists and stickers to contact former students of DMACC.

In addition to the computer, the student senate has formed a committee to contact the student body and organize the program. The committee is headed by co-chairmen Larry Keller and Mark Carlson with advisor Jon Schneider.

Any students or Alumni wishing more information or wanting to help the Alumni Association become a reality may contact the co-chairmen in room 3210 or Jon Schneider in Bldg. 4.

Donald W. Diehl, right, co-author of "Commercial Carpentry" presents a volume of the curriculum material to Des Moines Area Community College. Accepting on behalf of the college is Superintendent Paul Lowery.

Participating in the ceremony are: from left, Richard Toon, director of training, Master Builders of Iowa; Lowery; Marvin Yarrow, chairman of the building trades program at the college; and Harold Faber, chairman of the manpower and training committee for Master Builders and vice president of Ringland, Johnson & Crowley.

Votes 12-4 In Favor

The Student Senate recently passed the resolution raising the student activity fee for full and part-time students.

After a heated debate, and a roll call vote, the Senate approved the resolution by a 12 to 4 majority. The resolution will raise the fee for full-time students to $7.50 per quarter and a mandatory $.60 per quarter hour for part-time students.

The resolution faces another test as action is pending with the College Council and the Board of Directors. If passed by all committees the resolution will go into effect next fall.

Insurance May Not Cover Students

Jack Asby, Assistant Superintendent for Business Affairs, reports that the College does not carry personal accident insurance on students, only liability insurance. Non-college related activities involving students are the responsibility of the student. Low cost student accident insurance can be obtained for $5 per year. Students should contact the Business Office in bldg. 4 for further information.

Cycle Gang Sways Senate Vote

Motorcycle helmets may become mandatory if the Senate passes a bill passed by the House. One of the main reasons the bill passed was because of the more than $10 million in road use money the federal government has threatened to impound if the legislation is not passed. However, to this date, no federal money has been refused to a state because they haven't passed recommended legislation.

Also in the proposal is a section that requires all motorcyclists to use their headlights when they are operating the vehicle on a public roadway. An amendment by Krause of Palo Alto that would have required all motorists to wear helmets was defeated.

The House passed the bill with nearly a two-thirds majority despite opposition from many Democrats. They felt the bill should be defeated as a matter of principle, simply because the government was trying to force its passage. Several legislators said earlier they did not plan to vote favorably, but votes changed during the debate.

Debate on the helmet bill brought wide response from the general public, most of it against the measure. Also in attendance was a motorcycle gang, that inadvertently changed nine votes.

Another bill passed the Senate giving dismissed teachers the right to a neutral third party arbitrator if they choose to challenge the school board's decision.

Previously, the instructors' right to appeal was limited to the board that dismissed them. With the new legislation, teachers still may appeal to the school board, or may appeal further if they desire. Before, their only recourse was to the courts.

Also included in the measure is a so-called "laundry list", that was not requested by school lobbyists. The list specifies under what grounds an instructor may be dismissed. But most educators agree the new legislation is better than what they had before.

The bill is still not clear route to become law. It must still pass the House and then be signed by Governor Ray. While Ray is expected to sign the bill, the House calendar is rapidly becoming filled with appropriations measures. Speaker Dale Cochran says the House will adjourn before July first, but anti-trust legislation, land use, and tax reforms are still to be considered. Cochran recently told reporters these issues will be dealt with before the end of the session.

Watergate Conspirator To Speak At DMACC

Jeb Stuart Magruder, convicted Watergate conspirator, will appear at DMACC, Monday, May 5, in a special program planned by the DMACC Student Activities Committee.

Magruder, who served under Bob Haldeman as a special assistant to ex-president Richard Nixon, has served seven months in prison for his part in the Watergate conspiracy. He was released, along with several others, under a decision rendered by Judge John Sirica to shorten their sentences.

Magruder, who worked as campaign chief-of-staff and deputy director of the Committee for the Re-election of the President, was accused of giving political intelligence assignments to G. Gordon Liddy.

In his book "An American Life: One Man's Road to Watergate", and in his lectures, Magruder discusses the people and events of the Watergate saga, his role in it, and the changes that have resulted from it—both to him as an individual and to the country.

Magruder also says that Nixon had plans to accelerate to a position in which he could unilaterally control the country by virtually appointing his successors and through "absolute management become an absolute monarch.

Magruder will appear in the Little Theatre in Bldg. 24 from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

A Misplaced Conscience

United States citizens and the South Vietnamese government are at odds again, only this time, instead of fighting over arms and war equipment, the two factions have made the baby crib their battleground.

As South Vietnamese has graciously given up one province after another to the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong, Americans have become riddled with a sudden attack of conscience. Such an attack is becoming rarer and rarer in today's society. The attack felt by many Americans is in such massive proportions, it might be called an epidemic.

What has happened is that Americans, after over ten years of "accidentally" and possibly not so "accidentally", killing Vietnamese civilians have suddenly found that in their hearts they want to save the total crop of Vietnamese orphans.

Never mind that we did little to help Korean infants American soldiers left in that war-torn land, and never mind that it has been more than two years since the last "official" American soldier was stationed in 'Nam. It is now that Americans are feeling pangs of conscience which lead them to massively apply for Vietnamese adoptees.

Naturally the Vietnamese government has been a little more than reluctant to let these innocent by-products of war go to what has been hailed by many as the "promised land." How would Americans feel if a foreign country, such as Australia or Germany, began to airlift American orphans in groups of three or four hundred.

How would predominately Jewish Israel feel if its orphans were all of a sudden dropped into a Buddhist environment? How would any country feel if twenty years after a war which killed many of their young men it was discovered that that generation's babies had been airlifted out of the country and the normal replacement population had disappeared?

It is only natural for the South Vietnamese government to feel a certain resentment of the American airlift of orphans. That government probably believes it did more than necessary in expediting the release of the almost 2000 infants that have been airlifted.

Possibly what well-intentioned Americans should be doing is not looking at the miles of paperwork which have to be completed before an adoption is possible, but instead, should be looking into their bankbooks. Put into the proper agencies, such as the Red Cross, that money could be doing far more than just helping a few orphans. It could be used to help Vietnamese refugees, both orphans and those displaced by this war.

If the American conscience is to really be saved, more than orphans are going to have to be helped, a total country must be rejuvenated. That takes money, something very few countries can provide in massive doses. America can and I hope it will.

Unwarranted Funding?

To The Editor:

A man had two sons. Both were ready to leave home to make a life for themselves. As a gesture of encouragement and fatherly love the two were each given an amount of money by their father to do with as they saw fit.

Since the father was a respected man of considerable means, considered to be a self-made man by his associates, he encouraged his sons to plan wisely how they would manage the gift. They were informed of a special honor each would receive for responsible investing and spending resulting in prosperity and also of a dubious contempt their father would feel for either through negligent waste of the gift. The nature of each award was left to their imaginations.

Several possibilities for an ending are obvious so no space will be used to expand on them. However, the ending isn't the point of the example. The point is neither child necessarily had to have the money given to them. The intent of the father was to see if a sense of responsibility and personal respect or honor would manifest itself in either or both of his sons whom he hoped were mature enough to accept such a challenge. A prosperous return would result in the special honor of mutual trust and respect in all future dealings between the father and his sons whether monetary or social, whereas, an obvious waste where no honest attempt was made to distribute wisely that which was given free of commitments or repayment would merit the wrath and contempt of the father.

So it is with the student clubs which are recognized and accepted by the Student Senate. They are eligible to receive unwarranted financial aid paid for in full through the assessment and collection of the Student Activity Fee which is budgeted by the Student Senate Budget Committee and part of which is given to the Constitution Committee for distribution to these clubs.

Do not expect to receive any amount of money automatically, simply because you exist as a student on this campus and perhaps participate in a student club. Do not neglect your responsibility to declare openly how, where and why you managed your club finances and where and why you managed your club finances and activities. Be encouraged that your Student Senate is constructively settling and uniforming ways for students to benefit from their time, effort and money spent on their education at this campus.

Dwell not on the complaints and wrongs you see or assume but rather, help and encourage progress the best way you can. The Student Senate and all it's committees can serve you best when they are made aware of your specific plans and ideas. Speak to the Senators, complain or criticize constructively, encourage and suggest positively but please don't sit idly by hoping or expecting that by some miracle from out of the blue, that the Senate will automatically have the answers to any of the problems, or the facilities to provide the activities and entertainment, or the funds to spend on increasing student awareness, involvement, and status as responsible individuals in the eyes of those around us, because those kind of miracles only come in storybook fairytales.

The Student Senate needs the Student Body, for by working together cooperating positively, constructively and endlessly, we will all merit the trust and respect which we will rightfully and justly receive.

"Even The Diehards Gave Up"

By Martha Perry

It's Monday evening; time, approximately 10:15 p.m. I am on my way home from my night class in American Government. My nerves are just beginning to settle down from the test we had tonight. I'm on the last leg of my journey homeward. My mind is filled with visions of a nice warm bath and a relaxing hour with a good book.

I instinctively turn around the bend in the road. Suddenly, I see it! Fate has stepped in my way. I see the blinking red lights ahead and hear an ear-shattering noise. A terrible accident? No, it's a train! Cars have already stopped, and are lined up for over half a block. No possible way to get around it. Nothing to do but wait.

Being a veteran of these small catastrophies, I immediately begin making preparations. Turn off the lights, switch the ignition to accessory (a little music always helps), and light a cigarette.

I then look around at all the fools with their car motors running and lights still on--ready to start mov- at a moment's notice. I smile smugly to myself and think, "Boy, are they in for a surprise."

A car pulls up next to me in the adjacent lane. I am merrily singing along with the latest hit on the radio when I notice he is eyeing me coolly. I guess it does look a little strange to see lips moving as if in conversation when there is no one else in the car.

I light another cigarette. Well, might as well strike up a conversation with the fellow in the opposite car; after all, misery loves company. I roll the window down a bit and yell, "Pretty chilly out tonight, isn't it?"

Apparently preoccupied he says, "Do the trains always go across these tracks at three miles-per-hour?" I answer lightly, "Only when there are cars on both sides waiting to get across." (A little levity is in order once in awhile). I continue, "I have been seriously considering writing a letter to my congressman to see if refreshment stands can be installed on both sides of the tracks. That way you can get out of your car every half hour to stretch your legs. You can also get something to eat and drink to ward off exhaustion."

Only 25 minutes have passed, and it looks like the train is about to the end. Uninitiated motorists are turning their lights back on and revving up their motors ready to make the 30 yard dash.

Suddenly, a whistle is heard and a second train comes on the inside track. The first train comes to a standstill with only six cars left. Groans are heard all about. Bu. wait--there is hope. The guy on this train must be a speed demon for the train is clipping along about 15 to 20 miles per hour.

I light another cigarette and wait. The second train has now passed, and the first train starts moving slowly again. But victory is bittersweet. For a third time a train whistle echoes throughout the night. Another train has arrived, just in time.

This train is also moving along pretty fast. "Well, it shouldn't be too long now," I say to myself. "Another one wouldn't dare cross those tracks."

To my astonishment train number three starts to slow down. Veteran that I am, I feel a little tug at my heart. Sure enough, the train has stopped right in the middle of the tracks. Now, I'm beginning to wish more than ever that I had brought my book along, a flashlight, and a jug of water.

Twenty minutes more pass by. The fellow in the car next to me yells out, "There ought to be a law against this!"

"Don't worry," I say. "My government teacher mentioned just the other night that there is a law that a train can't sit on the tracks for more than 30 minutes."

True to promise, within ten more minutes the train has slowly started moving forward. I smile wearily to myself, switch on the ignition, turn the lights on, put my foot on the brake ready in a second to move from "park" to "drive".

The red lights at last have stopped blinking. Car lights are turned on. Motors are going again. (Even the diehards gave up after the appearance of the third train). At last we are beginning to move.

Guess I will give up that hot bath and book after all. I've finally made the big decision. Tonight when I get home, I'm going to write a nice long letter to my congressman and maybe I can even get extra credit from it for my government class!

Vets Eligible For Life Insurance

The Veterans Administration has announced that an estimated 39,000 Vietnam-era veterans in Iowa who are eligible for low-cost government life insurance must apply before the August 1 deadline.

Robert L. Winters, Director, VA Regional Office, Des Moines, said that veterans separated from service between April 3, 1970 and August 1, 1974, can sign up for the program called Veterans Group Life Insurance (VGLI).

He described the insurance plan as interim protection during readjustment to civilian life. Non-renewable, five-year term coverage is available in $5,000 increments up to $20,000. Monthly premium for the maximum coverage is $3.40 for veterans aged 34 and under, and $6.80 for those 35 and over. Nationally, some 2.7 million veterans are eligible.

Servicemen discharged after August 1, 1974, received application forms automatically, but those discharged before that date must apply, he said.

Winters said that former servicemen may convert Servicemen's Group Life Insurance (SGLI) to the VGLI program without medical examination if applications are received within 120 days of separation.

Applications after that time must include evidence of good health. He said this requirement is waived for veterans with VA-rated, service-connected disabilities.

Application forms are available from the VA Regional Office in Des Moines and veterans organization service officers. Completed forms and premiums should be sent to the Office of Servicemen's Group Life Insurance, 212 Washington St., Newark, N. J. 07102.

VICA Students Compete At State

On April 11th and 12th fifty DMACC students participated in the statewide VICA Skill Olympics.

VICA (Vocational Industrial Clubs of America) held the competition at the Hawkeye Institute of Technology in Waterloo. The students from various fields of education competed in seventeen various categories in each of their respective fields.

As of press time the results were not yet available.

Tomorrow Is Not

Tomorrow is not ours to see.
Why, you ask me?

For today is at hand.
And we must take it in full command.

Tomorrow is not ours to see.
Why, you ask me?

Because today is the day to live.
With all your heart to others freely give.

Tomorrow is not ours to see.
Why, you ask me?

Because it's not promised to you or me;
So we must forget that it ever will be.

And yet trust in the hope in which it lies;
For better days and brighter skies.

april's

last year
April gave me butterflies, flowers and beautiful dreams.

The butterflies, too thick to survive,
lay squashed in the street.

The flowers, too heavy for the stem,
died far too young.

The dreams, too beautiful for reality,
went to sleep in his eyes.

April, could I have one butterfly and a daisy this year?

You pick the rose
And the petals fall
And the life that was
Isn't there at all.

The child had died
Before he was born
But your life isn't over
You've still got to go on.

Their has to be a reason
For a life that never will be
And if now and again, you ask yourself why
Then I'm sure, one day, you'll see.

So go ahead and live a rich, full life
And carry your head held high
And one day, sure as you're a woman
You'll learn the reason why.

There once was a bee named Hercules
Who flew through the air with great ease
He started to freeze
Then fell on his knees
Thinking he'd caught a strange disease

He beckoned wise owls from their trees
To diagnose his peculiar disease
They told him 'bout fleas
And the birds and the bees
Then acquainted him with Heloise

Now he know's all about he's and she's
And the beginnings of new little bees
But Heloise is a tease
Though soon he believes
They'll be traveling together in three's

Catch The Sun

Help me catch the sun
Before it runs away.
And if we could,
We'd push aside
The darkest clouds.
Or make them hang
Somewhere else--
today.

But we're only men,
Who want
And need,
Mostly things
We could never have.
Searching for,
The one important thing
That's hardest to find-- ourselves.

Help me find the sun
Before it fades away.
And if we could,
We'd try and stop
The rainy days.
Or send them
Somewhere else--
to stay.

We'll make
Our own good times.
Take the little times,
And make them
Into big times.
We'll save
the best times,
For the times
That aren't so good.

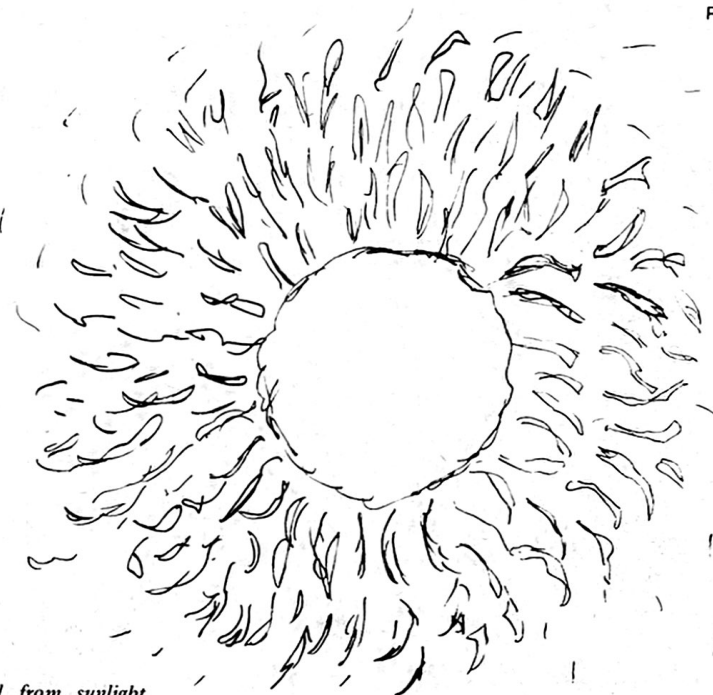

Help me save
A piece of the sun.
For when
The darkest clouds,
Get in my way.
Or when I think,
The rainy days
Are here--
to stay

The sun,
Is like a moving target,
Hidden beyond
The clouds.
I'd like,
Just once,
To soar above those clouds,
And grab the sun
Never to let it go.

It's so hard,
for me,
To catch the sun
By myself.
Won't you help me?
Please.

It looked at me and blinked surprise
Then smiled as if in ridicule.

I laughed aloud to see this comic creature:

You say it is Reflection in a Mirror?

"Age Of Enlightenment" To Be Shown

Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, founder of a new university, recently visited Fairfield, Iowa as a part of a five continent tour during which Maharishi inaugurated the "Dawn of the Age of Enlightenment."

Maharishi's teaching of Transcendental Meditation (TM) and the Science of Creative Intelligence (SCI) is studied by almost one million people throughout the world.

These people experience increased clarity in their own lives as well as increased appreciation of those around them. The quality of human life is improved through the practice of Transcendental Meditation so that we can herald the dawn of a new age.

Scientific research on TM at over 200 educational institutions throughout the world confirms these personal experiences of meditators that the physiology, psychology, and sociology of the individual practicing TM becomes more orderly.

TM, a simple mental technique, is practiced fifteen to twenty minutes a day. During this process the attention is turned inward toward finer states of thought allowing the individual to experience a state of rest approximately twice as deep as that attained during sleep.

During this unique state of rest the nervous system is able to dissolve deep rooted stress and fatigue which accumulate in the lives of all busy and dynamic people.

Research at Harvard Medical School, Stanford Research Institute and the University of Texas has shown that two twenty minute periods of this simple mental technique have beneficial effects in reducing anxiety, normalizing weight, relief from insomnia and an overall increase in energy. Many authorities agree that stress prevents the free expression of creativity in daily life. Happiness and fulfillment in all areas of life naturally increase as more and more of the potential is utilized.

TM is the practical aspect of the Science of Creative Intelligence. The Science of Creative Intelligence investigates the natural laws which govern the functioning of intelligence at all levels of creation.

Because the same creative intelligence underlies everything in existence, it is not surprising that parallels are found in various levels of organization in nature. For example, if 1% of the atoms in a bar of iron are synchronized the iron exhibits the properties of magnetism. Similarly, when 1% of the atoms in a laser are made to emit coherent light, the remaining atoms begin to emit coherent light.

These are but two examples of the principle that even a small degree of order in a field of disorder can have profound effects. Studies of the brain waves of meditators have shown a significant increase in the orderliness and synchrony of the different parts of the brain during TM. This orderliness provides the basis for greater and successful activity.

A preliminary study of 240 cities indicates that when the number of people practicing TM reaches 1% of the city population the crime rate drops and society leads to demonstrate that the creation of a better society than we are living in at the present is a very real possibility.

No longer should the idea be cherished that, "Life is a struggle." Now on the basis of verifiable evidence enlightenment is taken out of the realm of mysticism and uncertainty and into the realm of science. The state of enlightenment is a specific reality which is easy to achieve and available to all regardless of their life style or understanding. The ability to gain enlightenment is innate in the physiology of every human being and therefore should be experienced by everyone. As Maharishi has said, "There's no reason in our scientific age for anyone to remain unenlightened."

"The Dawn of the Age of Enlightenment" is a color video tape of an interview with Maharishi Yogi to be shown April 14 from 11:00-1:00 in room 2412G.

Career Advancement Scholarship Available

Awards are offered by the Business and Professional Women's Foundation to assist mature women who need further education or training in order to enter a new career field or to improve their chances for advancement.

Women aged 25 or over who are U.S. citizens may apply. Scholarships are granted on the basis of (1) an applicant's plan to use the desired training in a practical and immediate way and (2) demonstrated financial need.

No Career Advancement Scholarship may be larger than $1,000 for a year's study. Most are for $200-$400.

Almost any kind of education or training, academic or vocational, may qualify. The awards may be used for part-time or full-time study. Training must be in an accredited school.

The Selection Committee meets three times a year in March, June, and October. Applications will be considered only if an application form, letters of reference and a transcript have been received by the deadline indicated on the letter to applicants. Applications which are not complete will be held over for the next meeting. To obtain application forms write to the Scholarship Director, Business and Professional Women's Foundation, 2012 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C., 20036.

Volleyball Intramurals Begin

Intramural volleyball started April 7 at Terrace Elementary and at East Elementary in Ankeny. There are 12 teams competing in the coed division and 5 teams in the women's division. The games are played on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

Intramural basketball Nominated to "Who's Who"

Thirty-six DMACC students have been nominated for inclusion in this year's edition of "Who's Who Among American Junior Colleges." The students were nominated and approved by DMACC faculty members and administration.

Criteria for nomination include scholarship, citizenship, participation in campus organizations, and student leadership.

Nominated were Kenneth Andrews, Debra Baldwin, Wanda Bilsing, Gloria Blum, Jourd, John Boesen, Paul Brunsvold, Russell Durand, Buff Eischeid, Susan Farlow, Steven Fetters, Debra Garner, Linda Greaves, Jerome Greenberg, Michael Guisinger and John Hamilton.

Also nominated were Cindy Heithoff, Deborah Ivis, James Johnson, Dennis Johannesen, Jackie King, Ruth Kuehl, Lori Lekwa, Ruth McAvoy, Dennis McGowan, Deborah Osweiler, Jack Peterson, Julie Rutz, Pamela Sanford, Don Scheidt, Norm Schneider, Patricia Schnepf, Robert Titus, Linda Vande Berg and Sister Donna Ven-teicher.

Will You Feel The Money Pinch Next Year?

Have you figured your educational budget for next year yet? If you have and find yourself short of the money needed to achieve your educational goal, now is the time to start applying for financial assistance.

Just stop by the Financial Aid Office, Bldg. 3, 323B, to fill out a financial aid questionnaire. Our staff will then evaluate it to determine any and all types of financial assistance you may apply for. Students are given consideration for Des Moines Area Community College institutional funds on a first come, first serve, basis.

Stop by and see what we can do for you.

ESP

Aspects of para-psychology, sensory cues and psycho-trickery were just a few of the diverse areas of extra-sensory perception that Russ Burgess featured in his lecture. 'ESP In Action,' last Friday.

Burgess, a qualified Parapsychologist and general experimenter in ESP, believes that ESP is a part of nature in man. "I feel that ESP is a very spontaneous and illusive phenomenon," stated Burgess. "It exists, not as a science, but as an art form of creativity," he added.

The program was held in Bldg. 31, room 3106 in the new student lounge. Over 100 students and faculty observed Burgess display his advanced ESP.

Burgess picked up people's vibrations by accurately stating their names, and in one instance named one student's social security number.

Burgess predicted that in 1976 Gerald Ford will be re-elected and in 1980 Ted Kennedy. He said that by 1976 the U.S. economy will come to level off, and not until the 1980's will the U.S. have completely recovered from the current economic situation. "I believe that the 1980's will be golden years for the United States," commented Burgess.

According to Burgess, only complete idiots and morons can not be persuaded by the powers of suggestion. He believes that dreams are the most potent element of ESP.

'Shampoo'

not too clean

by Julie Rutz

It's not unusual these days to find entertainment that bases its whole theme on sex, and the motion picture, "Shampoo" does just that.

"Shampoo" is a movie that deals with the sex life of a beautician. It takes a humorous, yet serious look at the life and complications of a man who's affairs, (business and otherwise), create conflict upon conflict.

Warren Beatty, as George, the beautician, is the definite star of "Shampoo". His never-ending sex-drive is demonstrated and confirmed in his stylish acting manner. It appears that Beatty is definitely experienced when it comes to love-making. As a man of few principles, Beatty displays the frustrations of George perfectly.

Other stars are: Goldie Hawn, Lee Grant, Jack Warden, Tony Bill and Julie Christie.

All cast members of "Shampoo" cleanly fit into their roles. The confusion and extending circumstances are portrayed perfectly by the differences and similarities of the characters.

To reveal the plot of "Shampoo" would destroy the total essence of it. Though it concerns the life and times of a beautician from California, it could apply to almost any male or female anywhere in the U.S.A.

The interpretations received from "Shampoo" are left totally to the viewer.

"Shampoo" is not a movie that was made for pruders, nor a movie created for Walt Disney fans. Putting it mildly, it will either curl your hair or permanently straighten it.

'Godfather Part II': a striking contrast

By Martha Perry

The Godfather is alive and well and living in Nevada. "Godfather II" that is. This movie picks up where the first one left off.

The Corleone family has now moved from New York to the casinos of Nevada. One of the early scenes in the movie is a big party given to celebrate the First Communion of Anthony Corleone. This is the son of the new Godfather, Michael, and his wife, Kay. While the party is going on, a senator is meeting with the new Don. Michael is going to have to pay the senator several thousand dollars plus a percentage of the profits in order for him to be assured of a gambling license. Michael says no; the congressman laughs.

Strung in between the "now", is a series of flashbacks. These tell the story that was implied in the "Godfather". We see how Don Vito (the original Don) came to America from Sicily as a young boy. At different times, we follow his tracks in New York that led to his power. This begins with his killing the local kingpin while the neighbors are all in the streets celebrating a holy day. It's quite effective. With each shot of the gun, we are switched to the scene outside. A priest is conducting a Benediction, the incense is flowing, people are kneeling and kissing the ciborium. Bang. Bang.

We travel to Florida with Michael, where he is in the midst of setting up a big business deal with a local Jew. Then it's on to pre-Castro Cuba, the haven for casino owners. In between, there is some messy business of getting rid of a New York Corleone man, who is trying to take over.

Then it's back again to scenes of the original Don. We meet the younger versions of Tessio and Clemenza. There is also the Don's wife and in rapid succession the children: Sonny, Freddie, Michael, and Connie.

Big trouble then strikes. Michael has been called to appear before a Senate committee that is investigating the Mafia. Even Ton Hagen, the family Consigliori, can't help much. Well, one good thing. The senator mentioned above is on the committee. Good? Yes, he has now become a good friend of the Corleone's. The reason is that Hagen covered up the senator's nasty murdering of a prostitute. The senator gives a windy speech about the hard-working Italians being the backbone of this country etc. etc. It still is looking bad for Michael. But at the last minute, an "ace" is pulled; and the new Don goes free.

Now problems are piling up in the domestic area. Kay is shocked at Michael's lying under oath. Too, hadn't he promised her years ago that soon the Corleone family would be entirely legit? She's leaving him. Oh, no she's not, indicates Michael as he knocks her down. And then there's this little problem of disloyalty involving brother Freddie.

As with the first movie, this one gives us such striking contrasts. We see the tender scenes between the Corleone family members when all is going well. When it's not, we see only merciless bloodshed.

All of the characters still alive are played by the same people you saw and "loved" in "Godfather I." The big problem with this one is the constant switching between the past and present. If you can ever get used to it, it is an interesting effect. "Godfather II" is also quite long-over three hours.

What makes these movies so successful? "Godfather I" broke records both in the theaters and when it was run on on T.V. Despite its violence, it has a lot to say. The problem is figuring it out between all the killings. Well, anyone taking bets on how long it will be before Godfather III?

restful mind

The "Restful Mind" is Larry Coryell's album, with Collin Walcott on tabla and congas, Ralph Towner on guitar, and Glenn Moore on acoustic bass. Larry Coryell plays electric and acoustic guitar.

Describing the record is easy. Coryell's style is gentle with changing tempo and chord progression. You can feel his fingers fly ever so lightly up the rosewood and metal frets. His thinking is way ahead of the listener. It's like he's taking you for a walk knowing just where he wants to go, and you are delighted to follow.

His guitar sings of exquisite nature, each note gently laid on the one before, as carefully as a mason lays his bricks. The talent of Towner, Moore, and Walcott, from the Paul Winter Consort, supply the mortar from which Coryell builds a strong wall gently moving.

Listen, it will rest your mind.

'Earthquake': a smashing experience

By Martha Perry

For a movie that can really shake you up, try a dose of "Earthquake"; the "you are there" of the movies.

As the ad for the movie tells us, you will not only see the earthquake; but you will "feel" it. This is due to the latest gismo effect known as Sensurround. This movie should be condemned for its decible rating alone. You hear this spectacle, you see it, and you vibrate with it.

It is an experience. Beyond the special effects (and they are very good), the movie doesn't have much to offer. It has a sort of non-plot centering on a few lives before and after the big quake hits.

There is the owner of an architectural firm (Lorne Greene), his son-in-law (Charlton Heston), Heston's wife (Ava Gardner), and his girl friend (Genevieve Bujold).

Ms. Gardner plays a real nasty. She is in the middle of a fake suicide attempt when the first tremor occurs. This scares her so much that she must stop her little act. That proving unsuccessful, she visits Daddy. The idea is to have him give Heston a job that will remove him from the city, (and the girl friend), for a while.

Then there is the nice-guy and tough super-cop, George Kennedy. After the earthquake when everyone else is going bananas, he takes charge. There are all kinds of weird people around--like the National Guard leader who goes berserk and even a black "Evil Knievel". There are also hoards of flying glass, falling buildings, and bloody dead, and wounded people.

The worst thing about it all is that the tragedy could have been averted. Some whiz kid has figured out a method to detect earthquakes before they hit. This information is given to the mayor. The idea is to evacuate the people in danger. But the mayor doesn't want to cause a possibly needless scare, so no warning is given.

"Earthquake" is a super soap opera. The characters and dialogue are a bit too much. It could easily be subtitled: As the Stomach Churns. In the end, Heston must decide whether to attempt to save his drowning wife, or to climb up a ladder to safety and his lover. Which will he choose?

For special effects, "Earthquake" is like "Airport", "The Poseidon Adventure", and "The Towering Inferno" rolled into one. In this area it really shines; the rest of the movie is like cut glass.
