Former DMACC Chronicle editor, returns as news specialist

by Sandy Haegele
You may not be considering DMACC as a prospective employer. However, some students do eventually become employees of the college.

"A graduate of DMACC has a better understanding of the curriculum, structure and purpose of the college," said Diane Cooper (nee Petersen), former student now employed at DMACC.

Cooper graduated from DMACC in February, 1980. Two years later she returned as an employee. Cooper holds the position of news specialist in the college & community relations office.

For the college, she writes press releases, disseminates information, conducts tours of the campus, and is the "ad contact" person, placing college-related ads in various publications such as the Des Moines Register & Tribune.

Cooper was editor of the Campus Chronicle for two years as a student. She feels that because of the "well-rounded" education she received at DMACC, in all phases of publications production (part of the community journalism course), she was able to land a job as editor of Des Moines Magazine two days after graduation.

A small problem Cooper encountered in returning to DMACC as a staff member is that after two years of outside experience, she feels some faculty members may still see her as a "student" or "Campus Chronicle editor" instead of the experienced professional she has become by virtue of her previous employment and responsibilities.

"They tend to forget that two year interval," she said, "but overall, I've been well accepted back into this college community."

As far as changes on the Ankeny campus, Cooper noted the addition of trees. "There were no trees to block the winter winds," she said. "It's more attractive now, also."

Another change she noted came with the structural reorganization. "Many of the faces are the same, but now people have different titles," said Cooper.

One of those people is Dr. Joseph Borgen, who left during Cooper's first year at DMACC, and is now back as president of the college.

Cooper said she has to keep referring to an organizational chart to keep people's new titles straight, but she said it is still an advantage to be familiar with the campus and so many of the staff and faculty.

However, in one case, Cooper found the familiarity slightly difficult. She had to interview for the job with Tom Nelson, director, college & community relations, who had also been an instructor and advisor to the Campus Chronicle when she was editor.

"It was uncomfortable, and it was difficult to come off as a professional when we were so well acquainted," Cooper said.

"I was aware that I was not a shoo-in for the job, though," Cooper said. "In fact, I was surprised when I did get it."

The school "practices what it preaches" in that "you can come here, become well-trained and go out and get a good job," said Cooper. "If that job happens to be here at DMACC, all the better!"

Cooper also believes there is an advantage in the time element required in receiving a two year degree. "You can get a head start in the job market over those attending school for four years," she said.

As for the future, Cooper feels there will be a surge in enrollment at Iowa's community colleges because of the current economic situation, and that DMACC will continue to look to its graduates for future employees as the need arises.

According to the latest information available in the 1981-83 college catalog, others employed at DMACC, who have also been students, include:

Kenneth Collier, welding; Maralee Frazee, director, financial aid; Peggy Gaines, adult education; Linda Sue Greaves, coordinator, office occupations; Roy Havens, auto mechanics; William Hendrick, auto mechanics; Thomas Hornback, program chairperson, bricklaying; John Kleywegt, program chairperson, labor studies; Alberta Lee, dental assistant; James Marcussen, program chairperson, telecommunications; Kay Marten, career development center; Patricia Moore, accounting; Eileen Muhlbauer, nursing; Charles Smart, program chairperson, upholstery; Larry Swanson, data processing; Robert Taylor, diesel mechanics; Diane Vander Ploeg, medical assistant; Madge Verateegh, basic and related education; Venita Wells, coordinator, medical secretary.

Building Trades balk at previous debt

by Alan Cross

It's a case of robbing Peter to pay Paul, except that Peter doesn't want to be robbed.

Students enrolled in the Building Trades program inquired about joining the Quality Craftman's Club. They were told, however, that to do so, they would have to pay a substantial fee.

When the students asked the reason for the fee, they were told that the Quality Craftman's Club incurred an enormous debt two-and-one half years ago, and the debt has yet to be erased.

Larry Tyer, a representative for the building trades program, wrote in a letter to the editor (page 6) that punishing someone for another's mistake is unfair.

In an interview, Tyer said, "We don't want to pay somebody else's debt. We are talking of a debt of over $2,000. Not only are we going to be affected, but students 10 years down the line will also be affected as well."

According to Tyer, not only must the classes pay the fee, but a certain percentage of all their fund-raising projects must also go to help pay off the debt.

"I can't understand how a club could go in debt that far," Tyer said, "and whoever does know isn't saying anything."

Norm Luiken, former director of technology and industry, said that he sympathizes with the students but can do nothing.

"The students and staff at that time agreed that a certain percentage of fund-raising projects will go to pay off the debt," Luiken said.

Luiken said, however, he didn't think the students would have to pay a fee to join the club.

"I am not aware that these students have to pay anything, just percentage of their projects," Luiken said.

John Twedt, instructor, building trades and advisor for the Quality Craftman's Club, said he has strong feelings about the subject and the principle involved.

"I don't think these students or any future students should be expected to pay this debt. They are not the ones who are responsible," Twedt said.

Twedt was not the advisor for the club when the debt was incurred.

According to Tyer, the club is as good as folded because "no one will want to pay off the debt."

"If the administration is waiting for our class or future classes to pay toward this debt, it will have a long wait," Tyer said.

Tyer suggested that the administration wipe the slate clean and start all over again.

"They are not going to get their money any way," Tyer said.

Zuck relying on U of I lab to solve Bldg. 1 mystery

by Lance Coles

The state health department found nothing wrong in conference room 10, but the college is still investigating the mysterious illness.

Several college employees became ill a few weeks ago in a small conference room in the administration building, Bldg. 1.

An inspector from the state health department took air sample tests but told Don Zuck, manager, business services, that he couldn't detect anything that would make anyone sick.

According to Zuck, officials at the University

Hygienic Lab in Iowa City were contacted and "took samples of about everything possible," he said.

Zuck said they took samples of the air, carpet, ceiling tile and the vinyl base (kick board).

He said their test will check for approximately 400 different toxic materials "We've got something very thorough...this will detect what the problem is," he said. "If not, we go back to the heat and circulation problem."

"These people (from the lab) did say that some synthetic materials give off odors when they are new," said Zuck, "and some people react to these odors."

"This is a possibility," he said. "In time these odors will cure out."

Zuck said the lab officials told him that the college would have the results from the tests a week from today.

"I feel good about it from the respect that we got the samples to the best place in the state to get these samples checked," he said.

The room has been closed until the cause of the problem is found.

Gravel road pavement delayed another year; design work needed

by Mark Sarcione
 Reconstruction of the gravel road located on the south end of campus, scheduled for April, has been set back for another year because additional design work is needed.

The proposed work is called the Highway 416 project by the Department of Transportation (DOT). When constructed, the four lane, 1.5 mile stretch will extend from Highway 69 on west to Highway 415, giving DMACC patrons better access to the campus.

The new timetable for construction has the road being graded to two lanes by the summer of 1983 and paved to four lanes by the Fall of 1984. Bob Humphreys, DOT District Engineer in Ames said he now anticipates bids for construction to begin by the Fall of 1982. Humphreys said, "It was necessary to get plans completed so we could get the right of way. Bidding originally was to occur in December of 1981. This is when the plans and right of way purchase were to be completed."

Although the start of construction is now set for the summer of 1983 Humphreys said this schedule is tentative. "It all depends on the funding situation," he said.

Because of lower bids from contractors (13 percent below the DOT's estimates) the DOT has $18 million in savings. Lower bids resulted because of increased competition between road-builders whose businesses have been hurt by a slowdown in highway construction. Therefore, the DOT has decided to use the savings from the lower bids and money earmarked toward the Highway 416 project and other small projects around the state.

The cost of the 415 project is estimated at $6 million. The breakdown of this is as follows: $3 million for paving, $2 million for grading and $290,000 for purchasing the right of way.

Part of the highway will also serve as a dam for the proposed lake located south-east of Bldgs. 1 and 7 on the Ankeny campus.

Once the road is built, the DOT will be in charge of all maintenance (e.g. snow removal, repairs).

Jay Schreiner, Ankeny City Manager, said, "It (the highway) needs to be built. It will certainly help access to DMACC."

Don Zuck, manager business services, said of the delay, "I am very disappointed that it will not be completed by this summer as proposed." He said once the road is built it will help to alleviate traffic problems.

Tom Nelson, director college and community relations, said, "The institution (DMACC) would like to see it graded and paved by 1983."

Ruth Mallory, a resident adjacent to the proposed highway said, "I am glad they're going to do something with it. I think it would be good to have a road to Saylorville and it will help the traffic in Ankeny."

In contrast to Mallory, Hubert Reeves, another resident adjacent to the road said, "It isn't going to help me a bit. It will be harder for me to get out of my driveway with all of the traffic."

Jay Overson, of the Iowa State University research farm located southwest of DMACC, has mixed feelings about the project. He said, "As an Ankeny resident, I am in favor of it being built, but as an employee of the farm I am against it."

Overson said his reasons are that presently, to get to Ankeny from Des Moines, "you have to go out of your way from Second Avenue and with the new highway you will not have to go out of your way as much."

He is against the project because it will split the farm in half. Overson said, "The farm presently has one security fence around it. Once the highway is built, another fence will have to be built."

In addition, Overson said that traffic will be a problem as well.

Located on the western end of the proposed highway is a trailer court park owned by State Senator Gary Baugher and his wife Toni. The Baughers also reside here.

Toni Baugher said, "We are looking forward to being built." She added, "It will give the park more privacy, plus it will eliminate the present problem of dust." Senator Baugher was unavailable for comment.

FROM FINANCIAL AID

The following was taken from the May 6, edition of the Des Moines Tribune.

IOWA CITY*IA. - Many University of Iowa students are suffering from financial aid blues, according to a psychologist here.

Ron May, director of clinical services for the University Counseling Service, said 35 per cent more students used the service last semester than during the same semester the year before. And an informal survey showed that impending cuts in student aid and other money-related problems played a significant part in the rise.

"It used to be that most students were worried about making it academically. Now, they are worried about financial considerations," May said. "There used to be lots of places to get money. The problem was deciding what you wanted to do and how to do it. That's all changed now."

"It lowers their coping threshold," he said. "If they're having trouble with a relationship or something else, this saps their resources and causes them to come in for counseling when they wouldn't otherwise."

May said money problems "may present unique burdens to students because they are making identity decisions that will affect their entire lifestyle. This can have broad implications."

Maggert selected as new SGA president; Expressions still on hold

by Mark Sarcone

The SGA has a new president, funding for Expressions is still in doubt, and Urban Campus wants to form its own SGA.

This new business took place at the SGA meeting on May 12.

Sherri Maggert defeated Cathy Kaufman in a close race for SGA president. The meeting was then tabled, and an emergency board of governance meeting was held to approve the newly-elected president. Board members unanimously voted for Maggert as the new SGA president. According to the constitution, the president must be voted for by the board of governance as well as the SGA.

Maggert succeeds Matt Elmore, who resigned as president on May 5 because he said he was being asked to do things which violated his principles.

Further business indicated that funding for Expressions magazine, a publication produced by Summer quarter journalism students, is still unsecured.

Rick Chapman, English instructor and advisor for the magazine, said he was told over a month ago that he might have access to either unbudgeted income or carryover money. "I would appreciate it if you (the SGA) pass a contingency resolution that should $1500 or more carryover exist as of June 30 or July 1, it should go for the publication of Expressions," he said.

Chapman said that the Alumni Association at DMACC would like to match the proposed $1500.

Chapman said he estimates the cost of publication at $3000 "based on last year's cost."

"Many people are complimentary of Expressions when it comes out in the Fall," Chapman said. "But they have not come forth to help fund it now."

He said that the SGA would be reimbursed for Expressions if other sources of income are discovered between now and the time Expressions goes to press.

SGA members voted unanimously in favor of the contingency resolution proposed by Chapman.

In other new business, Jenne Salvato, Urban Campus, asked for a vote of support from the Ankeny campus SGA regarding the formation of an Urban Campus Student Government Association (USGA).

Salvato said, "We are still a part of this institution (DMACC), but we want to have a student government at our campus as well."

Gail Van Pelt, Ankeny SGA advisor, said, "I would like to see the funding (for the USGA) separate from us."

All members voted in favor of the motion.

In other matters, Rick Giudicessi, SGA advisor, said he would like to see SGA members get involved summer quarter. Giudicessi also mentioned the need for SGA members to work on the NECA convention to be hosted by DMACC and Drake and to be held Oct.

NECA is the National Association of Campus Activities of which DMACC is a member. Van Pelt said that the DMACC Student Activities committee does all of the booking for concerts as well as other activities through this association.

Dave Foy, SGA inter-campus communication, said a raffle for a zoo animal will take place.

Tickets for the raffle are available in the student affairs office.

The SGA member with the top sales will receive a dinner for two at Garcia's; the prize is being donated by Garcia's. Second prize is a $20 gift certificate donated by the Bookstore. Third prize is a $15 gift certificate, also donated by the Bookstore.

May graduating class DMACC's largest

by John McDonald
DMACC is expecting to have its largest graduating class to date when commencement is held at the end of the month.

On May 27, at 7:30 p.m., DMACC will honor its 1982 graduates in a ceremony at Veterans Auditorium.

According to Chris Schreurs, academic specialist, students need to fill out a graduation application and pay the graduation fee.

Applications will be reviewed and the college will then contact the students in writing as to whether or not all requirements have been successfully met.

Schreurs advised students to keep track of their academic requirements, since the college will not notify potential graduates that they are eligible for graduation.

Approximately 1200 students will graduate this month. Students not attending the commencement ceremony will receive their diplomas via certified mail.

This year's speaker will be Jack Shelly, retiring department head of journalism at Iowa State University.

Students having questions about the requirements or graduation may contact Chris Schreurs at ext 354.

Initial Alumni phonathon raises $3,700

The first DMACC Alumni Association phonathon is now history and has been labeled a "success" by Mary Lonsdale, alumni specialist.

In this year's phonathon, which was held May 9-13, $3,700 was raised.

The purpose of the phonathon was to increase alumni memberships and provide scholarships to needy students, said Lonsdale.

The student loan and grant programs, recently cut back by the Reagan administration, have a 1983 projection of $2,077,723, a 40 percent reduction from the 1981 figures of $4,056,837. Further, by 1984, a 50 percent reduction from 1981 will occur.

Alumni, student, and staff volunteers phoned alumni from 6:30 to 9 p.m. each evening during the fund raising effort.

Since the phonathon ended, a Des Moines businessman has said that he will match the pledge dollar for dollar if at least $5,000 but no more than $6,000 is raised by the Alumni Association.

Lonsdale said that "The phonathon was a success, but it will be even better if we can receive the matching pledge."

The DMACC Alumni Association must now raise at least another $1,300 in order to receive the matching pledge.

Lonsdale said, "We contacted alumni from 1977 to the present." She added, "We would like to obtain more alumni phone numbers so we can reach out further, but we have built a good base to start on now."

Adams proves hypnosis not a cure-all but can reduce test anxiety

by Alan Cross
Remember watching the late, late show and seeing an evil scientist saying to a beautiful blond, "Look into my eyes! You are getting sleepy! You are in my power!"

The is the concept most people have about hypnosis. hypnosis, however, is not the deep, dark secret it used to be and can be used for more productive purposes than having someone act like a chicken.

According to Joan Adams, instructor, nursing, R.N., hypnosis can help people quit smoking, lose weight, relieve tension and do a variety of other things.

"It is a form of relaxation," Adams said. "You are not asleep while you are being hypnotized, just relaxed and more open to suggestions.

Adams has hypnotized several of her students, mostly to reduce test anxiety. One of the students she has hypnotized is Mike Grimm.

Grimm said that he used to get really low scores on his math tests, with his lowest being a 58 per cent.

"It wasn't because I didn't know the material," said Grimm. "I went to the Learning Center and did well until it came time to take a test. Then I would get nervous and forget what I had just learned."

Grimm said that since

Adams has hypnotized him and taught him how to relax, he does excellently on his tests.

"I'm getting 90's and 100's," said Grimm. "I owe that to Mrs. Adams."

Adams said that people must realize that hypnosis is not a one-shot deal.

"I don't zap anyone. It takes time, and the person has to want to improve," she said.

To emphasize this, she took another drag on her cigarette and laughed, "See I was hypnotized to quit smoking."

Adams said that for best results, a person should go through three sessions plus reinforce the sessions with self-hypnosis.

Adams has hypnotized students individually and in groups.

"You get better results going one on one with an individual," Adams said.

Adams said, however, one girl did quite well after a group session.

"She use to get so worked up before a test," Adams said. "Right after the session, she took a test and was smiling all the way through it."

Adams said that people will not do what they normally wouldn't do under hypnosis, and people can learn only as much as they will allow themselves.

"Hypnosis won't make you a genius," Adams said. "But it will make you better."

Feelin' Fine

Campus Nurse
Gertrude Schultz R.N.

It's finally spring, and the usual complaints of red itchy eyes, nasal congestion, sneezing, scratchy sore throat as well as difficulty breathing, especially at night have arrived. The culprits in this instance are allergens such as the pollens from trees and plants as they bud. The more pollen in the air, as well as the amount of wind, increase the discomfort.

The best treatment for allergies is controlling or avoiding the substance causing the discomfort. Use air conditioning, and air purifying devices whenever possible, especially during the night so the person can get adequate sleep and be able to work. Antihistamines can help to counteract the histamines the body releases after exposure to the pollens. Desensitization, by means of injecting minute amounts of the substance into the body to develop an immunity to the substance, may take several years but is generally considered the most effective treatment available.

Skin allergies are caused by reactions to a chemical, dye or weeds such as poison ivy or oak. Avoid these substances, wash your hands thoroughly, avoid eating, drinking or smoking while handling any of these items, and wear protective clothing and masks when handling caustic chemicals.

If symptoms develop, call your physician or stop in if I can be of any help. Hay fever or allergies are not considered serious, but sure can be troublesome.

Urban students allege errors in story on governing body conflict

To the Editor,

We feel that it is necessary to respond to a number of false statements published in the article, "Student government, constitution result from Urban SAC upheaval" in the May 3rd Campus Chronicle. The Facts are:

*No governing body has been created. A group of students has been elected, independent of the SAC, whose sole responsibility is to propose a constitution to be approved by the student body, and to seek necessary recognition as the student government for the Urban Campus. It has no power to represent the student body or handle student funds.

*With the exception of the dissolution of the ad hoc committee, the student activities council remains unaffected in its functioning. The persons elected cannot make decisions concerning student funding and activities. Any attempt to do so would violate the cause for the establishment of this group, namely seizure of "power and money" without constitutional mandate.

*SAC secretary Chris Fogelson questions starting on establishing a constitution at the end of the year. The only response we can foster is, "Yes, why now? Why not at the beginning of the year when the SAC gained 'access to power and money'?"

*A number of students were offended by published statements that the recent events were "handled" by a member of the college faculty. Although Florence Loss' role as a consultant must be recognized along with those of Cary Israel, Dutch Kleywegt, and Gail Van Pelt, it must also be noted that each consulted only at the specific request of interested students. Although the SAC had failed at attempts to spark interest or draft a proposed constitution, this group of students formulated a government concept, drafted a rough constitution, consulted with an attorney, a parliamentarian and the SGA officer, and brought together the largest group of students in the campus' history for such a purpose in less than three weeks' time. Yet the Chronicle credited these accomplishments only to Dr. Loss.

*All actions were above the table. Any interested parties had access to the same information and consultation. Interested students were in fact handicapped by the initial inaccessibility of SAC information, and then by the indecipherable mess that has been labeled SAC minutes. If the SAC had accomplished only what they stated on these documents, they deserve to be cast aside.

*The Chronicle reporter sought an interview with only one student, who left the meeting quite early and thus was able to respond to the reporter's questions in emotionalized ignorance.

In the spirit of accountability, however, we are willing to answer any further questions, defend statements made in this letter, or respond to further charges. Please contact any of the persons below.

Urban students reply

To the Editor,

I feel compelled to set the record straight as to the recognition dinner for our associate dean, Morris Johnson.

It is not the recognition that we contest, but the fact that we, the student body, had little participation in either the decision to give Morris this honor or in participation in the program itself.

I recently questioned Jan Wood, SAC advisor, about the number of student participants on the roasting panel. Her response was, "The students who participated set up the tables." This, to me, indicates that there was little student participation in either the decision or program events.

I submit copies of the council minutes which speak for themselves. (To see the council minutes, contact the student life office at the Urban Campus.)

Again, we are not questioning the recognition for Morris but, rather, who is making the decisions to spend student money. Is it the staff advisor or the students?

Thank you,
Jennie Salvato

Cures for money woes

Where there is no organization and no accountability in the dispensing of monies.

The efforts of the students to remediate this is long overdue.

It seems to me the administration should have required this a long time ago.

Sandee Dawdy

Hours wasted

Chris Fogelson indicated he spent over 100 hours involved in the SAC.

Witness the minutes. Those hours were wasted and the role of secretary wasn't his calling.

Sincerely,
Raymond L. Michael

Lack students

Immediately after Fogelson accused the new group with not having the student body at heart, Wood went on to say that SAC had done a good job, but she and Fogelson further stated that they lacked the support of the student body.

How can a council which supposedly acts in the interest of the entire student body do a good job when it lacks the support of the student body?

Georgia Stefan

The Campus Chronicle wishes you a stimulating Summer

Unfair assessment for previous debt

An open letter to President Borgen,

I would like to call your attention to the following situation:

The class of the 1982 enrolled in the Building Trades made an inquiry into joining the Quality Craftman's Club. They were then told they could become part of this group, but only if they paid a substantial fee. Upon inquiring as to the reasoning behind this, they were told that a class of several years ago graduated owing the school a substantial sum of money, and that this is the method the administration uses to recover the losses.

I earnestly need to draw your attention to the unfairness and the implications inherent in this policy. Such a policy would endanger every club on campus or at least every club not presently formed.

We are also aware that this decision was not made by the new administration, and ask that you enlighten us as to the present policy. We also ask that you think about the following:

*Will we, the students, be coerced into paying for an administrative oversight?

*Would you join a club if advised you would have to pay a substantial fee to do so?

*Should both your administration and students be penalized for something in which we had no part?

*These are important questions and they need to be answered, not only for the students directly involved, but for the entire student body.

We thank you in advance for your cooperation.

Quality Craftman Club

Lance Coles bids farewell to Chronicle after two years as editor

The front cover of this issue is titled the Last Hurrah.

For me, this is my last hurrah.

This is my last issue with the Campus Chronicle. I'm moving on to further my journalistic career at ISU.

No more 20-hour press nights. No more excuses for missing deadlines. And no more irate readers.

It may sound like I'm glad it's over. I am, but, then again, I will miss it all in a few months.

There are so many people I want to thank, but there isn't enough room in the paper to list all of them.

All of the Chronicle staff who have worked for me for the past two years have been great. I know I didn't tell them that a lot, but I didn't want them to get big heads. Sorry, gang, if I didn't thank you enough. You do really deserve it.

I want to give a special thanks to Diane Cooper, Dan Haecker, and Randy Marchant for all their help, confidence, and support.

I want to thank all of the administrators, staff, and faculty who have taught or helped me in any way. (I hear a few members of this group cheering because I am leaving.)

There are two people here that have influenced my life in many ways-Tom Nelson and Owana McLester-Greenfield.

When I first came here, I had Tom for a photography class. After a couple of his classes, I knew I was going to like college.

Tom was and is an interesting instructor, and he was then the main reason I decided to go into journalism. Thanks Tom!

It's no wonder that he has an ulcer. With some of the things I put him through.

The Journalism program and the Campus Chronicle lost a lot when he went to work in college relations.

When I took Basic Reporting, I couldn't believe Owana was the instructor. She looked like a student.

Owana has done a lot for me with my mechanics in writing. I know my mechanics are still weak, but that isn't her fault; it's mine.

Owana really helped us with the paper this year after Tom left. I appreciate her willingness to stay late on press nights.

Tom and Owana have both influenced my life in many ways, and I appreciate that more than I can express in words.

I have the greatest respect and admiration for both of them, and I owe a lot to them.

Thank you, Tom and Owana, and the whole Campus Chronicle staff. I will miss all of you.

Lance Coles

Student looks to future

Seven quarters ago, I started at DMACC. On May 27, 1982, I will have completed my eighth quarter and will become a graduate. As I look back through time, I think about all my experiences, both good and bad. I have thought about the academic and personal growth that I have experienced. To me, everyday is a challenge and an adventure, for each day I live and learn.

I have lived through sub-zero weather and four foot snow drifts, and learned that I should not always listen to the school closings.

I have lived through classes that I was told were easy but really were not, and learned that I should not always listen to my friend's advice.

I have lived through days when there was more water on the sidewalks than on the newly planted sod, and learned that you always have to be on your toes.

I have through days when there were more plastic sheets than tiles because of the leaky roof in the pit. Someone visiting the school probably thought he was being raided by the 52nd division of the U.S. Air Force. I learned to look before I leap.

I lived through two quarters with the Campus Chronicle and learned to be different.

DMACC was a good beginning for me, over all it's a real "10." Next year I will be at Drake University, looking at two more challenging years.

To me, it is important to remember the past, take part in the present and plan for the future. Finally, a special thanks to my family for their patience, Lance Coles for his support, and the journalism staff for all the good times.

Bioenergies conditions mind and body

Humanities 199, also known as bioenergies, to date is just another curriculum elective. But if you think about it, everything we do is an elective.

We elect our field of study and, hopefully, elect to put forth the effort to make our decisions pay off. The reward? Success.

Consider that one of DMACC's unspoken obligations is to prepare the student for success.

Enrolling in bioenergies may not mean the difference between success or failure, but it appears the course is designed to create success in areas usually overlooked by both students and institutions alike.

Bioenergies has been dubbed a course in "Consciousness and Conditioning." This may sound a bit esoteric to some. However, exploration of the meaning of these terms makes them as applicable to one's personal well-being as financial success is to one's checking account.

Consciousness has several definitions, one of them being "knowledge of one's existence," and another, "the activity of the mental faculties".

In simple terms, this means increasing the awareness of one's own thoughts and desires.

In theory, this is just one of the discoveries a student might make while studying the life energy of the mind and body.

If one searches for the appropriate definition of conditioning, "to put into a fit or proper state" seems to apply.

The student is pleased to find that in order to condition the body, he or she does not need to experience discomfort on a regular basis.

Initially, one might find that a previous lack of mobility has resulted in some stiffness in the muscles and joints, but the conditioned body tends to age with flexibility as well as grace.

So, relax. Bioenergies offers a non-violent escape from immobility through flexibility exercises. With increased mobility, the student progresses to a state where jogging or calisthenics is refreshing and invigorating.

Conditioning of the body is believed to have an amazing effect on the many energies within the body. Misappropriation of "inner energies" may be the leading cause of stress and other discomforts which follow people into their social and professional lives.

For this reason, time is given to teaching proven methods of relaxation, centering, and meditation. Such exercises teach students to quiet the mind, under the theory that the mind lives within the body, and if the mind does not rest, neither does the body.

Further, the connecting link between the mind and the body is the emotions. Through increased consciousness and conditioning, the student becomes more aware of his emotions and ultimately learns to express them with direction, control, and understanding.

An attitude surrounding bioenergies is that it is not simply an exercise class, but an education in holistic health. Increasingly, educated people are developing the belief that a large percent of illness may be eliminated through right exercise, nutrition, and attitude.

Harold Sartain, bioenergies instructor, allots classtime for discussion of nutrition, and provides experience in yoga and aerobics, combining Eastern and Western methods of body awareness which emphasize limbering, breathing, balance, and tension reduction.

Students are encouraged to establish personal goals in life-long, self-styled fitness programs that will compliment their preferred athletic involvement.

Students are also provided with reading material for understanding the bioenergetic process, and to help them formulate their own ideas and attitudes based on real experiences and methods discovered by individuals who have dedicated their lives to healthful living.

DMACC and its ruling body intend to continue this form of progressive education. Bioenergies will be offered next quarter but will not be listed as Recreational Leadership (RECR 140).

The course will remain open to all students and credited as a social and behavioral science.

Bioenergies will remain an elective. Someday the importance of such courses may out-rank requisites. After all, what good is a high-paying profession if you can't get to the office?

Winter Dean's List boasts 1000 students; 3.25 GPA a minimum

Almost a thousand students received recognition for their scholastic accomplishments for the Winter Quarter, 1981-82.

To be eligible for the Dean's list, a full-time student must receive a 3.25 grade point or better.

Anyone that feels their name should have been on the Dean's List should contact the Registrar's office in Bldg. 1.

Five teams in DMACC's 'successful' Olympics

by Mark Sarcone

What do pie throwing, a gunnysack romp, a balloon bash, and an obstacle course have in common?

Usually nothing. However, the week of May 10 through 14 they had everything in common.

These were the four events that were part of the 1982 DMACC Olympics.

Approximately 100 people participated in the Olympics events.

On Monday, May 12, five teams gathered in front of Bldg. 5, to do battle in the pie throw-up contest. A pie throw-up involves a four-person relay team in which a pie is thrown over a suspended rope on the other side of the rope.

The five teams competing in this year's Olympics were banking, fashion merchandising, industrial marketing and management, OEA-FAA (Office Education Association-Future Accounts of America), and printing.

Taking first place in the pie throw-up was banking with a time of 36 seconds. In second place was OEA-FAA with 41 seconds. Printing came in third with 45 seconds. In fourth was industrial marketing and management, with 47 seconds. In last place was fashion merchandising with 49 seconds.

The same five groups showed up on Tuesday, May 11 to fight it out in the gunnysack romp, where fashion merchandising made up for its last place finish on Monday by garnering first place with time of 41 seconds.

Industrial marketing came in a close second with 42 seconds. In third place was banking with 48 seconds; OEA-FAA came in fourth with 73 seconds, and printing was disqualified for not finishing.

The balloon bash, which was held on Wednesday, May 12, in conjunction with the other activities on lower campus, is planned to be completed today at noon at the Child Care play area.

Fashion merchandising and industrial marketing tied for first, catching four water balloons each. OEA-FAA came in third with three water balloons. Banking and printing battle for fourth today, having caught one water balloon on Wednesday. Because of these ties, a playoff was held today.

The balloon bash was based on a one-minute time limit, and the team with the largest number of balloons delivered successfully to the targeted area was the winner.

In the final day of competition, banking took top honors in the ultimate obstacle course with a time of four minutes, 22 seconds. The contest was finished just before the downpour began.

The obstacle course consisted of six-person teams. Each person on his or her respective team had to roll everything from a basketball to an egg over a course without using the hands or feet.

Coming in second place was fashion merchandising with a time of 6 minutes, 22 seconds. Printing came in third in 7 minutes, 22 seconds, and industrial marketing and OEA-FAA both forfeited.

The team point standings as of Friday were as follows: banking was lingering to first place with 25 points. In second place was fashion merchandising with 18 points, followed by printing with 21 points. Industrial marketing and OEA-FAA were deadlocked in fourth place with 10 points each.

The overall team winner will be determined by the tie-breaking balloon bash event held today.

Sue Stewart, activities assistant, said, "I thought the events were successful. The participants seemed to enjoy the activities."

Stewart hinted the present Olympic structure might be changed. She said, "We will probably keep similar activities, but I think we will eliminate the entry fee so we can get participation from more groups on campus."

Salaries of DMACC employees are public info, printed annually

Each year the Campus Chronicle publishes a list of faculty and administration salaries. Since the information is open to the taxpaying public, this year will be no exception to publication.

It should also be noted that some salary listings are those covered by nine month contracts while others are for twelve month contracts.

Dead jurors out in Oregon; Vermont vetoes underwater whistling

by Lance Coles

Next time you're in Knoxville, Tennessee, remember it's illegal to lasso a fish.

This is just one of several strange laws that Dick Hyman put in a book published by Reader's Digest called It's Against the Law.

Some more of these weird laws are:

•In Nicholas County, West Virginia, no clergyman shall tell a funny story from the pulpit.

•In Compton, California, dancing cheek-to-cheek is prohibited.

•Beanshooters are prohibited by law in Arkansas. Any person found using a beanshooter or similar implement shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

•It is illegal to hunt or shoot camels in Arizona.

•The use of motorboats on the city's streets is against a local ordinance in Brewton, Alabama.

•In Ohio if you ignore an orator on Decoration Day to such an extent as to publicly play croquet or pitch horseshoes within one mile of the speakers' stand, you can be fined $25.

•In Hanford, California, people may not interfere with children jumping over water puddles.

•A Lake Charles, Louisiana, law makes it illegal to let a rain puddle remain in your front yard for more than twelve hours.

•It is against the law in Pueblo, Colorado, to raise or permit a dandelion to grow within the city limits.

•It is against the law to slap a man on the back in Georgia.

•In Walden, New York, it is illegal to give a drink of water to anyone unless you have a permit.

•In Vermont, it is illegal to whistle under water.

•An Ohio law makes it a felony for an instructor of roller-skating to seduce a female pupil.

•It is unlawful for a man or a woman to go unshaven in Carrizoz, New Mexico.

•A Kansas game rule prohibits the use of mules in hunting ducks.

•A Fort Madison, Iowa, law requires the fire department to practice for fifteen minutes before attending a fire.

•In California a housewife may go to prison if she doesn't cook her husband's lunch after using it.

•In Elko, Nevada, no one shall walk upon the street without wearing a mask.

•In Kansas it's against the law for eating places to serve ice cream on cherry pie.

•In Texas, a person may not milk any cow that is not his own.

•New York City law says that it is a crime to have a deck of playing cards in an apartment located within a mile's radius of an armory.

•It is forbidden to cut the tail of any horse in the District of Columbia.

•It is against the law in Albuquerque, New Mexico, for hackmen to reach out and pull prospective passengers into the cab.

•The town of Star, Mississippi, has a law prohibiting anyone from ridiculing the public architecture.

•An Omaha ordinance forbids the use of the same finger bowl by different people at the same time.

•In Portland, Maine, it is illegal to tickle a girl under the chin with a feather duster.

•In New Jersey it's against the law to slurp your soup.

•A man may not wear a goatee in the state of Massachusetts unless he pays a fee or tax.

•In Wyoming women are required to stand five feet away from bars when drinking in public.

•A South Carolina law prohibits hip pockets because they furnish a convenient place for pint bottles.

•The law in Denver states that it is unlawful to shoot jackrabbits from the rear window of a streetcar.

•In the town of Muskogee, Oklahoma, there is an old city ordinance which states that no ball team should be allowed to hit the ball over the fence or out of the ball park.

•In Oregon, a dead juror cannot serve on a jury.

•In Tusculumbia, Alabama, it is illegal for more than eight rabbits to reside on the same block.

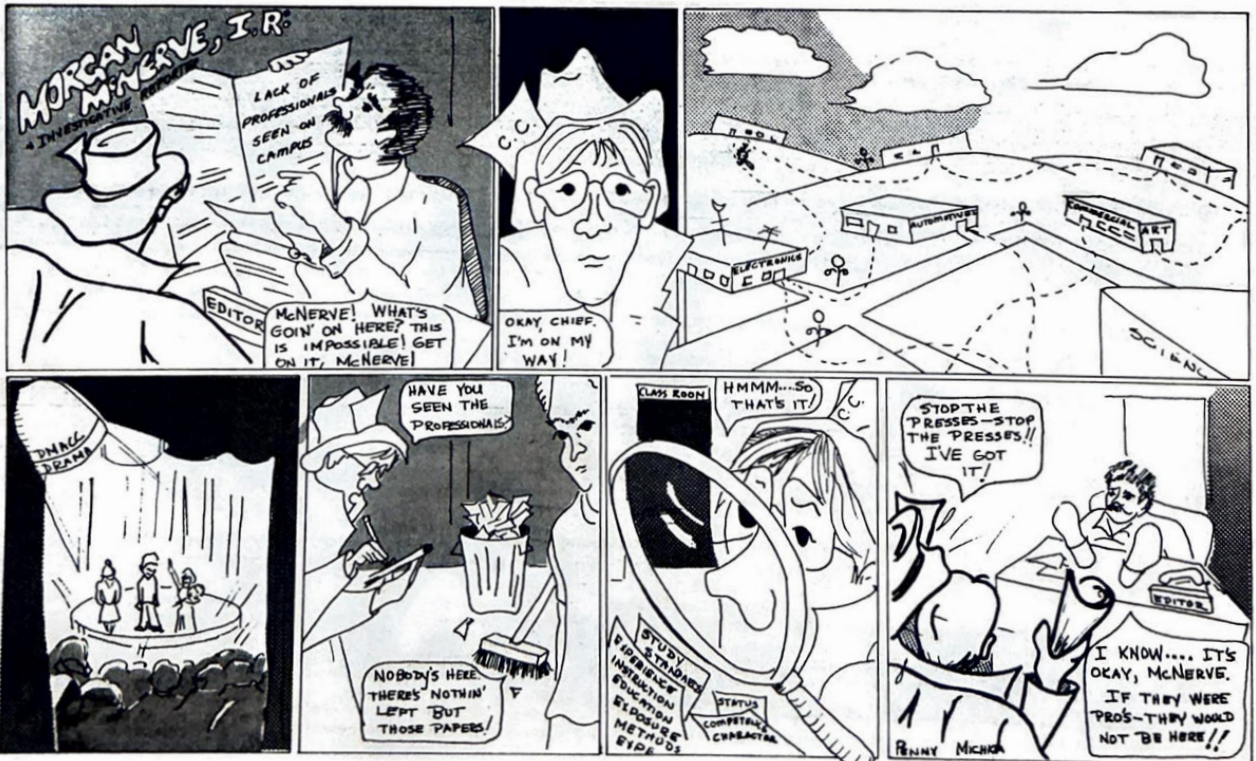

•It is a criminal offense to put salt on any railroad track in Alabama.

•In Houston, Texas, dogcatchers are required to be psychoanalyzed by a psychiatrist to determine if they are qualified to chase stray mutts.

The book is almost ten years old and several of these laws could have been changed; still it is a good idea when traveling to know the laws.

•In Rochester, Michigan, anyone bathing in public must first have his suit inspected by a police officer.

Musical comedy provides lighthearted entertainment; 'Mattress' sparkles with several stand-out stars

by Alan Cross
A colorful cast and a lively comedy made "Once Upon A Mattress" an entertaining production.

When a cast and crew perform as excellently as this one did last Friday afternoon it is hard to pick out outstanding performers. There are, however, those that do deserve special recognition.

Teri Hodenfield, who plays Lady Larken, has the strongest voice in the cast. Her duet, "In a Little While," with Sir Harry, portrayed by Stephen Blobaum, added a nice change of pace to the comedy.

Mynita Gross played Winifred (the unlikely princess) beautifully. She did especially well in "The Swamps of Home!"

A stand-out talent on stage was Jim Winder, who portrayed the Jester. His performance in "Soft Shoes" was the finest scene in the musical.

Bev Bender gave a truly fine performance as the bitchy Queen Aggravain. There isn't a particular scene in which she stands out because she performed brilliantly throughout the play.

Good vocalization in a performance is difficult, but a good performance without vocalization is an even greater challenge. Reike Plecas, who plays the mute King Sextimus, handled this challenge admirably. His use of pantomime was especially noticeable when he explained the facts of life in "A Man-to-Man Talk" to Prince Dauntless, portrayed by Scott Hoek.

Hoek is also to be commended on his performance.

The hardest part about writing a review of a musical is that mentioning the entire cast and crew by name is impossible.

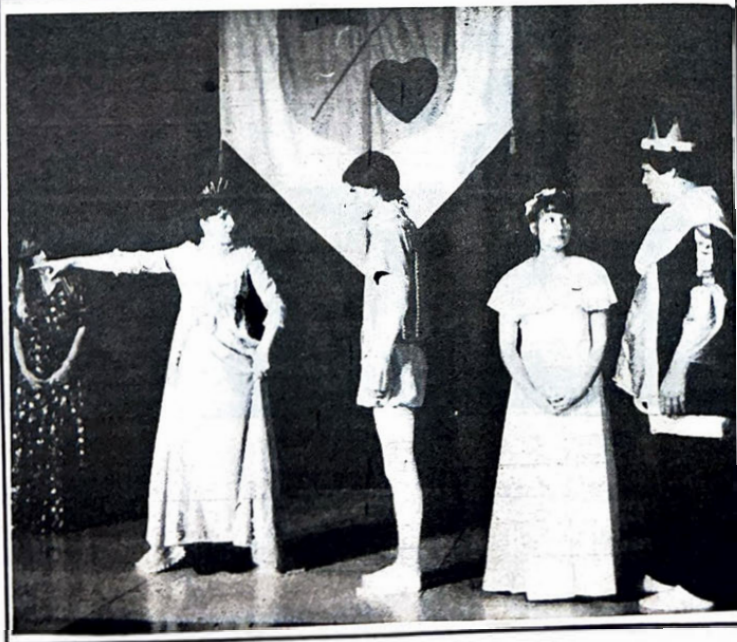

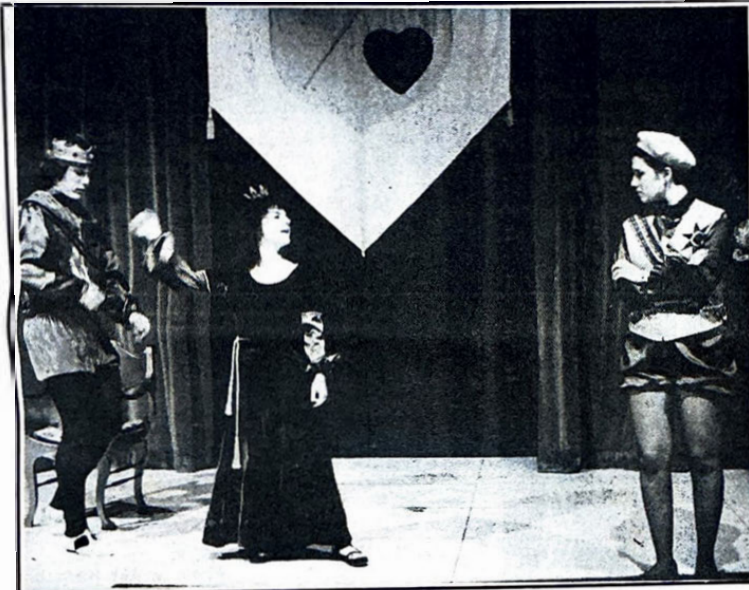

Those people, however, should be applauded. Even though they were not always in the spot light, the show would not have been a success without them.

As the program states "Once Upon a Mattress" contains no serious message --just good humor and laughter.

Homecoming is a success

by Mark Sarcone

The week-long DMACC homecoming has again proven to be a success with the Ankeny campus community.

Some of the week's festivities were the crowning of the homecoming queen and king, the John Biggs concert, the Colt 45 concert, and the DMACC Olympics.

John Biggs kicked off the week by entertaining students in the lounge area, Bldg. 5.

His music ranges from bluegrass to folk music to country. Biggs has performed on campus several times in the past.

During the Biggs concert, Bev Bender, fashion merchandising, was crowned homecoming queen, and John Vaux was homecoming king.

The dress theme for Monday was Western. Gail Van Pelt, activities assistant, said, "Western day received the best response from students." She said all of the workers in the snack bar as well as the bookstore were adorned in western garb.

While listening to the sounds of John Biggs, students also had the opportunity to purchase hot dogs at the hot dog feed. Van Pelt said, "We didn't seem bought hot dogs and that 'SGA' took in approximately $110."

Tuesday, May 11, was School Colors Day, but Van Pelt said, "We didn't seem to have too many people wearing them."

Andy Callahan of Caricatures Unlimited was on hand Tuesday. He was located in the student lounge, Bldg. 5.

Because he arrived late Monday, Biggs performed again on Tuesday for free.

Nerd Day was the theme for Wednesday's festivities. Steve Laudik, accounting specialist student, was dressed for the occasion in a punk rock outfit. He said, "I felt like getting real obnoxious on Nerd Day."

Even though the skies were overcast, students and staff came out from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. to listen to the country rock sounds of Colt 45, who performed outside of Bldg. 19. The band played a variety of music ranging from Blue Oyster Cult to Poco.

Van Pelt said that Colt 45 would like to come back to DMACC sometime because they enjoyed themselves.

In conjunction with the outdoor concert, Andy Callahan was again drawing caricatures.

Besides these activities, three campus organizations were on hand to appease the appetites of the concertgoers.

Fashion Merchandising students sold hot dogs, Retail Marketing students has a Nacho sale, and Industrial Marketing and Management students said popcorn and pop.

Van Pelt said, "There was a positive response from students on east campus for the activities."

An all-star softball game between Ankeny and Boone was also scheduled as part of the day's activities, but was cancelled due to rain. The game is now scheduled to be made up on Wednesday, May 19, at 5 p.m. on the west diamond.

Thursday, May 13, was 50's Day.

Tom and Jerry, "The Breakfast Flakes" from KSO radio in Des Moines, were on hand in Bldg. 5 from 6 to 10 a.m. to do a live radio show.

Van Pelt said she noticed that more students than usual were in Bldg. 5 on Thursday morning. "I was real pleased with the turnout," she said.

She said "They (Tom and Jerry) interacted with the students and staff on the air really well. I would like to have them back next year. They did a real good job."

Friday's theme was Grub Day. No activities were scheduled.

Van Pelt said that next year DMACC's going to try to have a contest for the best-dressed person on each of the respective days.

Overall, Van Pelt said she felt this year's homecoming "went very well." She said, "I was pleased with the turnout, the activities and especially with the east campus concert and activities."

SPORTS

A variety of sports and activities offered to Summer students

by Mark Sarcone

Summertime means outdoor activity, and plenty of outdoor activity there will be this Summer at DMACC.

A summer softball league will begin July 12. Any student or staff member can form a team. Signups start June 21 and end July 7. All games will be played on the west softball field, and, if enough teams sign up, two diamonds will be used.

In addition to the softball league, tennis tournament will take place in July. Sue Stewart, activities assistant, said that a specific date for the tournament has not been set, but said, "It will probably be an all-day single-elimination tournament on a Saturday."

The competition will be open to all students and staff members, and the tournament will consist of a men's, women's and a double's division. All matches will be contested on the west tennis court near Bldg. 5. However, Stewart said, "If we have enough entries then we will play it in Ankeny."

For the game-room-aholics, a gameroomathon will be held in the gameroom in Bldg. 5. Stewart said four events for contestants to compete in are: billiards, foosball, table tennis and video games.

Participants will receive points for placement in each event, and an overall winner, the person who accumulates the most points in all four events, will be announced.

The gameroomathon is open to all students and staff. Signup starts on June 28 and ends on July 14. Competition will get underway on July 19.

The Frisbee (disc) course which opened on May 10 will also be available to any student or staff member. The course is a par-four, nine-hole layout and is located on campus. Participants must check out a disc and course instructions at the equipment checkout room, Bldg. 5.

Besides sponsoring sports on campus, students activities is planning a trip to Apple River, Wisconsin, for a weekend of tubing and camping. The trip will occur June 9, 10, and 11. Anyone interested should contact Sue Stewart, ext 334, for more information.

Student activities also offers discounts to Woodside and Toad Valley golf courses in the Des Moines area, Worlds of Fun and Oceana of Fun in Kansas City, and Adventureland, plus the usual discounts on concert tickets.

Students blame Loss for SAC/SGA conflict; Loss denies charge

by Lance Coles

The former President and Vice-President of the Urban student activities (SAC) council blame an instructor for the present troubles between the SAC and the temporary student government association on the Urban campus.

"The whole trip (conflict between the two groups) is that Florence Loss wanted money for her class to take a trip. I think it's unfair," said Venus Hamilton, former SAC vice-president.

"Florence Loss started all this," said Bob Watley, former president of the SAC. According to Watley, Florence Loss, psychology instructor, approached him and said that she wanted some money for a trip to Minneapolis.

Several members of the SAC said they believe Loss started the new student government just because she was denied money for the trip.

Loss said her involvement with the new group had nothing to do with being denied funding for some of her psychology students to attend a conference in Minneapolis.

Loss said the situation came about because some of her students went to the SAC and wanted to see about getting funds for the trip. Denial of the funds "led to some students becoming critical of how SAC was spending money," said Loss.

Loss said that her students began to ask questions that she couldn't answer.

"I said invite Bobby (Watley). He has all the answers," said Loss.

She said she invited him to meet with the students, but according to Loss, "There was some concern about the meeting as to why and for whom. On his way here, someone told him (Watley) that the group was out to get him. We weren't."

Watley didn't show. "The group (the temporary student government) has a goal of a constitution and by-laws. They did not abolish them (SAC). They were building something. They wanted a constitution and by-laws," Loss said.

"We weren't really together as far as by-laws, but we were trying," said Watley. "People won't give us the consideration that we tried."

"They stomped us," said Watley. "Jennie used to be nice to us. Not now. They just didn't give us a chance."

"I've got too many things on my mind to deal with," said Watley. "I've got to keep up with my schoolwork. They weren't even interested in the council until Florence got this stirred up."

According to Watley, Loss called him on the Saturday following her request for him to talk to her group and told him SAC wasn't going right.

He said she called him again on the following Tuesday and said, "Don't think the college is coming down on you. We want to know what is going on with our funds."

"I came in Thursday and told Zack (Zack Hamlett, dean of Urban campus) that I can't handle it with all the phone calls and all," said Watley.

According to Watley, Loss wanted to sit in on the meeting with Hamlett. She said to Hamlett, "I told you there was going to be trouble." She also said that some of the students had contacted their lawyers, but that she didn't know why.

"I was so far behind in my class, I felt there was no way out," said Watley. "Is God trying me or is Florence Loss trying me?"

Watley said that Loss called him again on Monday and that he hung up on her.

"She then got a friend of mine to call, which upset my father," he said.

"I don't know what happened after the time I talked to him about talking to the group," said Loss. "I really don't know what I could have possibly said to him."

She did admit that she had called him a couple of times and said the second call was made after she had heard he had dropped out of school.

Watley did drop out of school but is presently back.

He is bright and capable, I don't want to see him lose," said Loss. "I don't think that anyone has ever said anything negative to him."

Loss said that if Watley felt he was being harassed by her, she certainly didn't intend that.

"He is a good man. I feel strongly about that. I feel he was fed some inaccurate information," Loss said.

"He didn't have the support of the group (SAC) to make it strong and thriving," Loss said.

"I don't want to give the Urban campus a black eye," said Watley. "We're trying to work to expand the unity of the whole college."

Watley also said that he never fired Hamlett (vice president of the SAC). He said, "The only thing I said about Venus is that she dissolved her workstudy."

Another issue that has caused some conflict between the two groups is the surprise party for Morris Johnson, dean of student development.

"She (Loss) didn't think that the council should have given it. She thought the staff should have," said Watley.

"Morris has done a lot for us," he said. "There were students that attended the party, quite a few."

"The issue is not that Morris Johnson got the dinner. If the student body had gotten to vote on it, we would have spent a lot more," said Jennie Salvato, secretary/treasurer of the temporary Urban SGA.

"We're not sure if they (SAC) are in opposition to this constitution and by-laws. This is not the issue here. The issue is that we want to make our own decisions. We have only one thing and one purpose in mind - the constitution. We're not tapping student funds, and we have no power or access to funds," said Salvato.

According to Watley, Salvato and Loss both were asked to be part of the SAC some time back, but both declined.

"Never," said Loss. "I've never been honored. Never was I approached. I would have gratefully accepted."

"I hate that it all had to come to a conflict like this," said Watley, but he added, "There will be a viable resolution to all this."

"I'm not trying to put Florence down. I still don't understand what is going on," said Watley.

He added, "I feel bad that some people were hurt in the process. It was long in coming (the constitution with by-laws).

Watley has said that he is willing to work with the new SGA.

"This organization could only profit from his participation, I'm sure," said Loss. "I'm sorry he got squeezed out in the process."

"We want to make sure the student body makes the decision," said Salvato.

Salvato said the student activity council was never elected by the student body. "This is the first time anyone has begun to question what has happened," she said.

Watley said, "We did vote on giving Morris that reception. We talked about it twice before voting on it."

Salvato said, "The council was never elected by the student body."

Experiment proves useful

by John McDonald

Last quarter, Don Irwin, a experimental psychology class conducted an experiment with the help of the general psychology students.

"Who to Fund" was the name of the experiment, which consisted of ten applicants who were hypothetically applying for welfare.

Ninety general psychology students were to rank the applicants from highest to lowest priorities.

Irwin added to the experiment by presenting a video and a written format. Each format was identical with the exception of the video's visual aid and nonverbal communication.

The result of the experiment surprised students and faculty. There was only a slight difference in the way students ranked the applicants, which proved that each format provides little discrimination between variables.

Dr. Jan Simons, psychology instructor, said, "I was surprised there was such a strong correlation between the ways students ranked applicants. It would seem that the video format would have had a different ranking, due to the nonverbal communication."

Don Irwin, psychology instructor, said he is pleased about the result of the experiment.

"The exercise proved to be more useful because of the way it turned out. It's sometimes hard to get a video tape. Therefore, an instructor could use the written format and still feel comfortable about the results," he said.

Discussions

The Urban campus is sponsoring an open discussion with the candidates for governor, Lt. governor and state representatives on the Urban campus, Wednesday, May 19.

The discussions will be held at 10:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 6 p.m. to 8 p.m.

According to Urban campus officials, the discussion will be an informal one, in hopes of a large turn-out.

The Urban campus is located on Seventh Street, just north of the freeway.

For more information call Harriet Custer at Urban.

Petition

Several concerned students and the SGA will be circulating a petition regarding President Reagan's proposed financial aid cuts.

The petition will be posted on the bulletin boards throughout the campus, and a table will be set up in the pit area of Bldg. 6.
